

"What do you know about that—a MILD cigarette that satisfies!"

Chesterfields have done "the impossible"—they satisfy and yet they are not strong. They are MILD! Chesterfields do for your smoking what bacon and eggs do for your breakfast—they satisfy.

And yet Chesterfields are MILD—that's the point.

No other cigarette can give you this new enjoyment (satisfy yet mild) because no cigarette maker can copy the Chesterfield blend.

This blend is an entirely new combination of tobaccos and is undoubtedly the most important new thing in cigarette making in 20 years.

BRYAN, WILSON, HUGHES

Some years ago an ardent disciple of William J. Bryan died in Connecticut. He left a modest estate and bequeathed a sum of money to his idol. In addition he left a sealed envelope containing directions to pay a handsome amount to Mr. Bryan. The widow and her advisors did not recognize this document as an essential part of the testator's will and the needs of the widow were such that she did not feel that she could spare the money. Yet Bryan went into the courts, fought that widow and tried to wrest from her the money which she needed and which he would claim in only a shadowy fashion. The courts turned him away empty-handed.

Six years ago Woodrow Wilson resigned the presidency of Princeton University in order to enter politics. He was elected governor of New Jersey and came into receipt of the largest salary he had ever enjoyed. By reason of his political position and through the aid of George Harvey, then at the head of the Harper publishing establishment, Dr. Wilson's books took on an increased sale and his royalties were largely augmented. Yet he sought to persuade the trustees of the Carnegie Teachers' Pension Fund to make him a grant—though his years in the professional chair did not entitle him to receive it, though the manner of his leaving the teaching profession did not warrant his claim, and though his financial circumstances were not such as to bring him within the purview of the Carnegie benevolence. The trustees turned him down.

Five years ago Joseph Pulitzer died. He left a large estate, a portion of which comprised the great newspaper properties the New York World and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. He sought the perpetuity of those properties and for that purpose he named certain trustees. Among them was Charles E. Hughes, upon whom alone of all the trustees designated Mr. Pulitzer laid no limitation of his term of service. To Mr. Hughes Pulitzer bequeathed $100,000 as recompense for his service. Hughes declined the trust and the bequest, though at the time he had nothing but his salary as a justice of the supreme court, though there was no legal bar to his acceptance, though the wishes of the testator were not only clearly expressed in the will, but

"PROSPERITY"

The Democratic party is basing its chief hope of victory in this campaign on the cry of "prosperity." "Wilson has given us good times," say the Democratic orators, "therefore, he should be continued in office."

The Democratic party took over control of the National Government on the 4th of March, 1913. In October of that year the new Democratic tariff law went into effect. Between October, 1913, and the beginning of August, 1914 (when war began in Europe), the Democratic party and the Democratic tariff law had the destinies of the country in their keeping. And during that time the Democratic party and the Democratic tariff law ran absolutely true to form. No Democratic spell-binder raised his voice in the first seven months of 1914 to talk about busy factories and prosperous working men!

Below is a sample of the sort of news that was appearing in the papers during the months when Mr. Wilson and his party were laying to produce prosperity without the assistance of munition contracts:

TWO MORE CINCINNATI TRAINS TO BE REMOVED

Pennsylvania Lines Continue Retrenchment Policy—Cincinnati Territory Is Not Greatly Affected—President of Great Railroad Tells of Economy.

Retrenchment on the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburgh, which has been in progress for sixty days and which will be given added impetus April 5, will not affect the Cincinnati territory quite so much as in other sections, according to Clarence Bell, chief clerk to Superintendent Barnard. The latter was out of the city Thursday, but according to a Pittsburgh dispatch, 25 trains have been annulled on the system west of Pittsburgh and 25 more have been ordered discontinued on April 5. In this last batch are two passenger trains between Cincinnati and Richmond, Ind., known as 46 and 35. According to Chief Clerk Bell, the retrenchment plans were completed some months ago and were not announced until the orders were effective. Reductions in operating forces really began last fall, and on January 1, 1914, 13,000 less men were employed on the system than had been employed at a corresponding time the previous year. The force is now down to what officials consider "bed rock."

We once heard a preacher say that a rich man has a hard time crowding into heaven. But that isn't disturbing our blissful dreams.

An exchange shouts that "dollar beef is in sight," and here's hoping that editor is the biggest liar on earth.

had been reinforced by oral messages before Mr. Pulitzer's death.

Today Bryan in order to advance Wilson's political fortunes, is assailing Hughes with veiled insinuations of dishonorable conduct today Wilson's press agents and advocates on the stump are defaming Hughes' integrity and motives, today Wilson himself is within a hair's breadth of the same thing.

Yet above is the instructive record of the three men—Bryan, Wilson and Hughes—Bloomington, Ill., Pantagraph.

TO CHARM AWAY THE SHADOWS?

President Wilson is reported to believe that Fridays, black cats, and 13's are lucky. As a result he is being deluged with charms and tokens of all kinds. From one woman admirer he has received a four-leafed clover picked at his feet during a speech. Is this designed to make pleasant reading for future generations, and to divert their minds from the picture of unavenged, wrecked American homes in Mexico, and avenged Lusitania babies lying in rows in a foreign morgue? Or are the charms to be used against an evil day of self-condemnation for too much said and too little done?

If the public library has a copy of Woodrow Wilson's "History of the American People," some of our foreign-born fellow-citizens will find something to interest them in Volume 5, page 213, where the distinguished author says: "The Chinese were more to be desired as workmen, if not as citizens, than most of the coarse crew that crowding in every year at the Eastern ports."

Just before starting to pitch the first world's series game for Brooklyn Rube Marquard announced he was going to take the stump for Wilson. A few minutes later he was knocked out of the box. Yes, coming events surely do cast their shadows before.

Some of our Democratic exchanges, since the rise in the price of bread, are advising the women to make their own bread. But bacon is thirty cents a pound and the board of health won't let us keep a couple of hogs in the back yard any more.

Ollie James says that Woodrow Wilson filled the dinner pails of the workmen of the country. If he has such a wonderful power as that, why doesn't he fill the treasury without calling upon the American people to dig up additional taxes?

One of the criticisms of Wilson is his "just rocking along" policy. Hughes has a record of consistency that should appeal to the voters in this age of troublesome times.

A 34 per cent increase in the cost of the principal foodstuffs is the way the Wilson administration has kept its pledge to the people.

WOODROW WILSON'S WOBBLY WAYS

LIGHTNING CHANGE NO. 137

President Wilson says that he will "maintain the dignity of his office" by not making any stump speeches. But he was making stump speeches more than a year ago, when he declared that the Republican party had not had a new idea in 30 years, and when he denounced that party for maintaining what he called outworn economic principles, on the tariff question. Why does he so suddenly change his mind as to the effect of stump speeches upon the "dignity of his office?"

IF ELECTION WERE OVER

While Democrats Are Admittedly the Champion Question Fiends, It Is Believed This Quiz Is an Unanswerable as Their Most Childlike Effort.

If election day were past would President Wilson make so little of the principle of arbitration in industrial disputes? Would he be so sure that it is more important to preserve peace, when a great strike is threatened, than it is to make judicial methods rather than force the means of settling differences between capital and labor?

If election day had come and gone would Mr. Wilson keep the national guardmen of the country in camp on the ground that they may be needed to protect the United States against Mexico? Would there be months of inaction and indecision in which no use is made of a large body of citizen soldiers? Would they not be allowed to go home or else be set in motion to make Mexico as safe a neighbor as the Administration seems to think that it is already?

If election day were past would the President drive through Congress a bill like the shipping bill which is intended to embark the federal government upon a new venture in a hazardous field and use $50,000,000 of the people's money to buy tonnage held above its normal value or else so owned that it cannot be used without peril of international complications? Is sound public policy behind such a measure or only campaign politics?

If election day were not to be considered would Woodrow Wilson use so many high and mighty words in international notes and do so little to make them mean anything practical? Would his deeds lag so far behind his phrases?—Cleveland Leader.

The President must be credited with having put a slick one over if he can get the votes and make the people pay the freight.

Latin politeness is proverbial, but aren't these Mexican commissioners exceeding the limit when they persist in likening Woodrow Wilson to Venustiano Carranza?

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
